A Lady Bought With Rifles

A Lady Bought With Rifles is set in Sonora in the early 1900s, just prior to the Mexican Revolution (1910-1929). The heroine, Miranda Greenleaf, the daughter of a prosperous English father and Mexican mother, was born in Sonora but sent to England as a young girl for a proper education. Miranda's father, Jonathan, the owner of a large ranch and a rich mine, died in a mine accident when she was fifteen, and at the outset of the story, two years later, Miranda is summoned to Sonora to be with ...

Unlike men, women have shorter arms and relatively less upper body strength. What I'm saying is that hunting rifles for women should ideally be lighter, shorter, and with less recoil. However, these aren't always the case with hunting rifles so you would have to substitute one aspect for another. So what rifles would meet this criteria?
